UDC 329.11(091)
Anotation As part of the history and scientific material of political ideas in Croatia, the conservative revolution during the Weimar Republic (1919-1933) is still almost unknown. Given the very paradoxical attempt to merge conservatism with revolutionaryism, the German Conservative Revolution of the Weimar Republic was indeed a bold attempt to synthesize revolutionary strategy and conservative thought, articulating the ideological matrices of philosophical idealism and vitalism, nationalism and political anti-liberal romanticism.

UDC 32Tito, J. B. * 32Tuđman, F.
Anotation It is neither irrelevant nor completely coincidental that in Hrvatsko Zagorje, in places less than twenty kilometers apart, two of the most famous Croatian politicians of the 20th century were born: Josip Broz Tito and Franjo Tuđman. Although they eventually became political opposites, they both spent their childhoods in the same climate. And in childhood it absorbs most of what later becomes crucial to nature.

Description 139 str. ; 21 cm.

Anotation The theme of this masterfully written, stylistically flawless and extremely touching collection is childhood. Maybe that's why one would expect a gentler or even sentimental book, but the stories in this collection are brutal, as much as it is brutal to grow up in a deeply rotten society that stands opposite the innocence of a sensitive and insightful child.

Anotation Petlja (The loop), the fifth novel by Franjo Janeš, begins with an accident that may or may not be, with an action that may be a reaction. With each chapter the plot, shifted from the perspective of another narrator, A tense, stylistically rich and, it can be said, socially responsible novel with an intricate plot that, paradoxically, is quite easy to follow, but after which it is clear that a miracle is needed to "untangle" all relationships and damage.

Anotation Karmela Špoljarić's collection of stories, different in length and style, narrator's position and type of narration, if we look at the collection as a whole, they really function like a carousel ride, finding meaning in constant movement, even circling which is sometimes not pleasant. The stories alternate different emotions (and their ultimate variants), rhythms of love and hate, memories and everyday life, virtuals and realities, losses and rare gains.

Anotation The collection of stories Truplo puno meda brings melancholic, strong and deep prose by one of the best writers of our generation, Josip Novaković. Beauty and brutality, happiness and nonsense, are real and surreal paradoxes on which Novaković's stories are based, and their characters are seemingly ordinary people who are trying to find a trace of beauty in an alienated world, from the American province to wartime Croatia.

Anotation A collection of stories Zbogom romantiko ! (Goodbye, romantic!) which through women's optics talks about partnerships, the reality in which we live, aging, invisibility, but also about the decisions we make or fail to make. Sanja Pilić's characters are mostly lonely, men and women who try to communicate, friends from different worlds embodied in the urban environment who share their experiences in a direct, drinkable and often ironic way.

Anotation Viewed through the history of Christianity, artistic images are inseparable from the practice and interpretation of faith. However, the reflection on the place and importance of these images did not develop in proportion to their prevalence and functions. In addition, artistic images were not usually taken as reference sources for theology to complete the linguistic and conceptual understanding of religion. The emancipation of modern art from religious life and ecclesiastical authority further complicated the theological evaluation of artistic images, and the theological relationship itself sometimes contributed to this unfavorable relationship between art and religion.

At the same time, the author's approach is based on research objectivity and subjective testimony: the author has been professionally involved in radio for 38 years, primarily as a radio drama director, but also as a widely informed participant and witness to structural changes in the radio menu not only in Croatia but also worldwide.
